New program helps area residents find jobs

Area residents of all ages who are looking for work may want to join the new Career Club at The Work Station in The Plains.

The Career Club is a free program that helps its members with a wide range of services designed to help people find work in the community. The group meets every other Monday from 1-4 p.m., and the members talk about their job searches and receive tips on topics such how to give a successful job interview and how to find information on positions that are available.

The Career Club also assists its members with their resumes, cover letters, on-line applications, job searching, the Ohio Means Jobs program, e-mail programs and other parts of the process of looking for a new job.

Many area residents may have never made a resume before, or they may be unsure about how to fill out an on-line application. Many people are also nervous about job interviews and are not sure how to handle the interview process. The Career Club helps with all of these areas, and many more. It's free to join and all area residents are invited.

For more information on the Career Club or to sign up, stop by The Work Station, located at 70 North Plains Road in The Plains, or call 797-1405.
